

Music Files: Can the downloaded MP3s be used with iTunes, iPod, iPhone, Blackberry or any MP3/Media Player?

The short answer is - Yes.

Our files are standard MP3's made to CD quality, and should be compatible with all devices that support the MP3 format

With reference to any issues arising with iTunes, iPod, iPhone Blackberry and any other MP3 or media players you should primarily refer to the instructions that came with your device, and have support from the device manufacturer, or from where the device was purchased. iTunes, iPod, iPhone, Blackberry provide ample support. We have provided links to this further down on this page. It would be unreasonable to expect Note Perfect to provide support for the many hundreds of these devices as they have their own instructions and support.

However there are a number of common sense actions to take.

- Download the zip files to a location of your choice on your computer.
- Ensure that the MP3s have been extracted from the ZIP files to a folder of your choice on your computer, that way you do not have to keep downloading them should you accidentally lose them. (NB. If you lose your files we will always supply them again so long as we are in business, and without charge).
- ALWAYS back up your files after you have downloaded them (both the zip files and the extracted MP3 files).
- Do not put the zip files onto your device, just the MP3 files go into it.
- Follow the instructions that you have for your device to transfer files to it from your Computer.

Browsing our site you will find many free MP3s to download and test on your player. We encourage you to do this.

IMPORTANT: Remember that in order to use our downloaded files on your player they MUST first be extracted from the zip files - See How do I extract MP3s from the downloaded zip files? It has been known for some to try and put the zip file onto the MP3 device. If you do this your player will not play them from inside the zip file, and cause other problems.
